Pedagogy & New Learning Spaces: Learning Walks 2010

Carlton North Primary School
Tuesday, 16 March 2010, 9:00AM - 3:00PM

This Learning Walk - Pedagogy & Space is designed to focus on developing teachers' understanding of the importance of new pedagogies for effective learning in new learning spaces.

Program Overview

This Learning Walk is showcasing Carlton North Primary School, Melbourne. The school is housed in a beautiful heritage building which has been redesigned within, and where the pedagogy and open learning spaces are working in innovative and harmonious ways.

Learning Walks offer unique and highly practical professional development opportunities for teachers and leaders.

This is a joint project between the University of Melbourne & iNet Australia that emerged out of the Smart Green Schools Symposium: 'Talking Spaces' in late 2009, where the need for follow up professional learning for teachers in regard to new learning spaces and new pedagogy was recognised.

Program Objectives

This Learning Walk - Pedagogy & Space will be suitable for both primary and secondary leaders and teachers who wish to:

- develop new learning spaces within an existing building or an entirely new building
- explore how these new learning spaces are operating, and investigate issues associated with effective teaching and learning in these new educational environments
